1,403 people died in the Mediterranean Sea from Mai 2014 until today

From the beginning of 2014 officials count 800 dead in the Mediterranean Sea between North Africa and Italy in the Straits of Sicily. According to our counts only from May 2014 and today, 27th of July, 648 people have died (counting only the dead bodies and not all the people who have drowned and are missing.) When counting even the people who were never found, and most likely lie at the bottom of the sea, there are about 1,403 people who have died in the attempt to cross the sea and arrive in Italy. 296 have died in May, 517 in June and another 590 in July until today. Most of them died before the Italian Navy came to rescue them and most of them drowned because their boat was sinking; other people were suffocated by the exhaust fumes in the engine room of the boat. The list below contains more detailed information about the date, the number of the dead and how the incident happened:
