The monthly census (see here, here, here, here and here) done by Help Refugees and L'Auberge des Migrants shows a decreased number of migrants in Calais. There are in the shantytown and in the structures created by the state (containers camp and center Jules Ferry) 8143 people, against 10,188 in September. This corresponds mainly to the self-eviction process observed for two weeks, people fleeing the threat of eviction, which will facilitate the final emptying and destruction of the shantytown.

On the other hand, the number of minors continues to rise against (1496 against 1179 in total, including 1,291 unaccompanied minors against 1022 in September) even though, behind the advertisement the government's plan remains totally inconsistent.

CHILDREN OF THE JUNGLE

Nowhere To Go for the Children of Calais

■ Sudan (37%)
■ Afghanistan (28%)
■ Eritrea (20%)
■ Ethiopia and Oromo (6%)
■ Iraq and Kurdistan (1.50%)
■ Other (4.50%)

We wholeheartedly welcome that the British Government have finally succumbed to public pressure to take unaccompanied minors with family in the UK.

Sadly, for the nearly 1000 lone children remaining, no protection is yet available.

A complete eviction of the camp is imminent. No protection away from the camp has been put in place for children.

NO children have yet been transferred under the Dubs amendment.

NGOs providing child services fear that many will disperse and go missing.

Over 52% of children have lived in the Jungle for more than 3 months alone
